MARGINAL COLUMN

By PETER GOTTRELL

THE announcement that a meeting between the former Italian Socialist leader, Pietro Nenni, and the Social Democrat leader, Giuseppe Saragat, had taken place last week has shaken the Italian political scene. Although it was known that efforts were being made to bring the two parties closer together, few realized that they had already reached a point where the leaders themselves could sit down and talk it over. For Nenni and Saragat have been arch-enemies since 1947 when Saragat led the withdrawal from Nenni's party of democratic-socialists. Until now, reunification of the two Socialist parties had been considered only a remote possibility, but now it has become a real likelihood in view of the statements which both leaders have made after their secret meeting at Frascati, an Alpine resort, indicating that the main differences of opinion between the parties have been overcome. Concessions have been made on both sides but two vital points concerning democracy and Italy's continued adherence to the Western group of nations have been accepted by Nenni.

THE fact that the secret negotiations which led to the meeting were conducted by the French Socialist senator, Comma, on behalf of the Socialist International, has provided conclusive evidence that unification will occur with the framework of Western solidarity and with the blessing of the British Labour Party and of the French and German Socialist parties. There is reason to believe that Italian Premier Segni was fully informed of the progress of negotiations. There is no doubt that the announcement of the meeting came as a blow to the right wing of the Christian Democratic party, the mainstay of the Italian right-wing forces.

THE Socialist party led by Nenni has 75 members of the Chamber of Deputies, and that of Saragat, who is a deputy Premier in the Coalition Government, has 18. The Communists, on the other hand, have been welcomed into a very small, at least officially, official Communist comment is "Any step leading towards the greatest political unity of the proletariat can only be welcomed by us." Unofficial Communist comments, however, are extremely bitter. From the mouth of Mr. Khrushchev's report on Stalin was made public, Nenni's attitude has been causing grave concern in Communist circles. It was clear that the Communists could no longer consider Stalin Prime Nenni as their trusted ally. It is impossible to say what Nenni will succeed in carrying with him his whole party, but there is no doubt that Nenni has played the right moment. The Communists themselves are in the throes of an internal crisis resulting from the denunciation of Stalin myth and therefore may be unable seriously to hinder Socialist unification moves.

THE appearance on the Italian political scene of a strong and united Democratic Socialist party will certainly revolutionize the present political picture. It may well have serious internal repercussions which have already started a campaign to oppose Saragat's unification, alleging that Nenni is acting on instructions from Moscow. The so-called "centre" coalition which has governed Italy since 1948 is now unlikely to survive. The Christian Democrats will be forced to make a clear choice: they will have to ally themselves with the new Socialist Party or they will have to fall back on support of the right-wing Monarchists. This is a difficult choice for a party comprising such heterogeneous political ideas that its only common denominator is religion.

New Destroyers Hold Torpedo Manoeuvres

Torpedo attack manoeuvres on the open sea were recently carried out by the Israeli Navy's two new destroyers, the Jaffo and the Hia, according to a military correspondent. The torpedoes had their usual warheads replaced by training warheads, which are filled with water instead of explosives. The crews first carried out a "dry run," going through all the motions of firing without actually shooting off the torpedoes. Afterward, they really fired them, the reverberation echoing thunderously as the torpedoes erupted out into the water. The judge said that the torpedoes' aim was very accurate, and that if the action had been a real one, the target would have been hit.

B-G Message to Jewry

The Prime Minister, Mr. David Ben-Gurion, had addressed the following B-G Message to Jewry at the Jove of the world:

The past year has been one of grave anxiety — of deep concern for the peace of Israel — as a result of the heavy armaments which have been pouring into Egypt from the Soviet bloc. It has also been a year of substantial progress, of steady immigration and continuous development of the country. This year Israel has received some 60,000 new immigrants, a new region — the Lachish Region — has been built up from the abandoned and desolate country opposite Hebron. Scores of new settlements have been established by new immigrants and by the youth of Israel. A new town, Kiryat Gath, is in process of construction. New settlements have been made in the Negev, and the fighting between the Jewish and Arab forces on the Egyptian border, and in the Gaza strip, near Haifa. The last year has also seen the international recognition of Israel's status as a sovereign state, and the holding in Israel.

Tanks Face White Race Rioters in U.S.

CLINTON, Tennessee, Monday (Reuter). Tanks of the Tennessee National Guard rushed into this town today to meet any fresh outbreak of rioting over the admission of Negro pupils to the local high school. The tanks were part of two National Guard battalions ordered to Clinton by the Governor to quell an angry crowd of rioters.

The admission of 13 Negro pupils to the school which has 800 pupils, in accordance with a Federal Court order, had not been expected to spark much opposition in an area with a sparse Negro population. Trouble broke out last Saturday.

Last night, troops with fixed bayonets and gas masks at the ready formed up as a riot broke out outside the school. The rioters, some of whom were armed with stones and bricks, were ordered to disperse. The rioters, some of whom were armed with stones and bricks, were ordered to disperse. ### In the Supreme Court

Civil Appeals

Before Justices Silberg, Golda and Ben-Zion.
George Goldmann, Appellant, v. Shmuel Zulkins, Respondent.
 (C.A. 40/55)

Room-Mate Not Tenant

The Supreme Court, in a majority decision, dismissed an appeal against a judgment of the Tel Aviv District Court, delivered on January 3, 1955 (C.A. 226/54).
 Johannes Goldmann and a friend had occupied a room in the flat of Shmuel Zulkins from 1947 to 1950. In 1950 Zulkins's brother, George, immigrated to Israel, and the former got permission from Mr. Zulkins to accommodate and brother in his room. In consideration for a slight rent in rent, a short while later, Zulkins varied the room's status to comply with Mr. Zulkins's request to "take his brother with him." George Goldmann continued to occupy the room together with his brother's room-mate, but the landlord collected from the latter only.

In 1955, when the room-mate left, Mr. Zulkins applied for a judgment against George Goldmann. The Magistrate's Court refused the application, consequently the case was reduced to the question of what status the appellant had acquired as a result of an agreement between the landlord, then he might have been inclined to agree with Justice Ben-Zion. But since there had been no direct contact between the appellant and the respondent, he was convinced that no relationship had been established between them.

The District Court, however, had not received the appellant as a co-tenant of the room but merely as a licensee. There was no rent paid, and the Magistrate's Court had erred in refusing to give an eviction order.

The Nature of 'Licence'

Justice Ben-Zion thought that the Magistrate's Court's decision had been correct. The only question at issue, he said, was whether the appellant had occupied the room as a co-tenant, or as his brother's guest and therefore a licensee. The difference between a tenant and a licensee has been discussed on several occasions in the past by the Supreme Court and there was no much new to add. The differentiation between licence and tenancy has become more and more difficult since the development of the rent restriction laws have taken in the past few years, the accent has been placed more and more on the subjective criterion of intention, to which no one could, in principle, object because the elastic nature of this criterion is eminently suited to prevent

At the Cinema

Yesterday's Press

Sabbath Demonstrations

Our (Hatsrat) writes that the Government has set up a Committee to probe the death of Pinhas Segal and to see out the city's military and police forces.

In real life, the heroine (Kim Novak) would never run away with the man (William Holden) and if he did she would prove a drag on him. So why the success? Partly perhaps because the various facets of the female character created, interest a feminine audience.

For me, the film's attraction lay in the picnic of the night, the excellent handling of the crowds and the dovetailed vignettes of a popular appeal. These sequences were infectious. Then William Holden gives a good performance as the man who does not come to pass; the men who make up that clique are but a handful of the Sabbath-observing community in general and it is therefore to be regretted that the film is so light.

Central European Touch

"CAROUSEL" (Amphitheatre, 10) was a successful musical by Rogers and Hammerstein, itself taken from Molnar's "Liliom." In fact, the Central European touch is a familiar one in the film version of "La Ronde" itself in a merry-go-round. But "Carousel" does not reach the level of "La Ronde." It cannot decide whether to be serious or lighthearted, although one's perplexity is eased by a charmingly catchy theme tune and some good songs. Again, the film fluctuates between the eclecticism of the original story and American folk musicals (the "Oklahoma"-Seven Brides for Seven Brothers school).

This latter element supplies the best sequences, the claim fishing in Maine, the dance on the quay, the yacht racing out to the picnic island and the picnic itself.

Gordon MacRae plays the dead hero who returns temporarily to earth to settle his personality and voice. On the whole, the gentlemen outshone the ladies.

Arabs Claim French Spying in Libya

Cairo Radio charged yesterday that a French espionage network has been discovered by Libyan authorities. Two French diplomats and French civilian were allegedly involved.

The radio also reported that the Libyan security police have arrested an alleged spy working for Israel. He will appear before a military court.

West Can Learn From Israel—Also

NEW YORK, Monday (UP).

The "Herald Tribune" columnist, Mr. Joseph Alsop, reported today that Israel made the most profound impression that he has seen in two decades of observing the world political scene.

"Now that we are faced with a world challenge to our freedom and our future," he wrote in the current issue of "The Saturday Evening Post" magazine, "may not the West perhaps learn a little from Israel's living purposefulness?"

He said that the "moral climate" in Israel today is seldom found in such countries as the U.S. and Britain.

"In Israel, the individual is not less the mass. Indeed, there is the same intensity, the same closeness of contact, the same true human interest in Israel life that the life of the old Greek city-states must also have had."

"Individual Israelis feel, more or less strongly and consciously, what their counterparts in Britain and America do not any longer feel."

Economic News from Abroad

Germany Orders Arms
Germany plans to spend over $100,000 on armaments during the period ending March 1956, and an additional $100,000 has already been preliminarily approved. However, only a small part of these armaments will be spent in Germany, as weapons, naval vessels, aircraft and even military vehicles are to be purchased abroad. The bulk of the armaments orders, totaling $100,000, will go to the U.S. and Italy. Britain will get the order for armored troop carriers which may amount to $200,000. The vehicles are to be delivered fully built, or to a mere $140,000, if only the Rolls-Royce engines and some components are imported. Though down payments on signing the contracts may average 50 per cent, with the rest to be paid as work progresses, no difficulties are expected on Germany's side in view of her large export surplus.

On the contrary, the intra-European payment situation is expected to be eased by these payments, at least temporarily. On the other hand, Germany will have the advantage of sparing her economy from dislocations and inflationary pressures in the wake of her rearmament, and keep on developing peace-time export lines, while her competitors will be busy producing armaments goods with little hope of getting substantial repeat orders.
